WESTBY LODGE OUR OCTOBER GUESTS

Solvang Lodge from Westby, Wisconsin were our guests in October. It was a beautiful October evening. During the day Rachel Storlie worked her magic in the kitchen making an amazing chicken rice hotdish. Other Valheim members were at home making salads, desserts and other goodies that were part of the fulfilling evening meal. The serving group came early and decorated and organized the food that was brought. Lefse was buttered. Coffee was made. When Solvang Lodge arrived they enjoyed punch and socializing. Anthems were sung, accompanied by Rachel Storlie and lead by Gunnar Tolleson. A good majority of the food was consumed. Everyone then settled back and enjoyed being entertained by a few of Rachel Storlie's music students: Elise and Celia Storlie, Sterling and Gunnar Tolleson. Bill Musser shared an excellent program about the Seed Savers organization and his music group, the Footnotes. Thanks to everyone who made the night so successful!

PREIKESTOLEN

The famous tourist attraction, Preikestolen, or the Preacher's Pulpit, is getting crowded. In 2014, the renowned cliff received 205,000 visitors due to favorable spring conditions, and in 2015 an additional 70,000 visitors are expected. The steep mountain platform stands 1,982 feet overlooking Lysefjorden, outside of Stavanger, in western Norway. The "pulpit's" nearly flat surface measures about 82 by 82 feet. Now the tourism association has to figure out what to do with the attraction's immense popularity.

Called one of the world's most spectacular views and natural attractions by Lonely Planet, Preikestolen was formed by a passing glacier around 10,000 years ago, and features a dramatic crack along its plateau. Geologists have confirmed that the plateau will eventually separate and tumble into the fjord, though this will not happen any time soon. Folk tales claim that when seven Lysefjord sisters marry seven Lysefjord brothers, the plateau will plummet, resulting in a deadly tidal wave. Because of the recent increase in tourism the Preikestolen Foundation is undertaking measures to limit how many tourists may visit the famous cliff at once. "It is quite crowded when there are 500 people up there," says Mayor Ole Tom Guse, in Forsand. He attributes the sharp uptick in visitors to the power of social media and photos of the area's breathtaking landscape. He adds, "The hike up to Preikestolen has come to stay. That is why we eventually have to find a way to regulate the stream of tourists." In 2013, a national scouting camp took place in Stavanger and sent 1,500 scouts per day for four days to the top of the mountain.

Hilde Charlotte Solheim, the Director of Travel and Culture for the commerce federation Virke, thinks Preikestolen's popularity is due to a mix of improved facilities and status. A project in 2013 and 2014 helped make the steep paths more user-friendly. Sherpas from Nepal were hired for a six-month project to widen paths and make them a little less rugged. These updates have already resulted in a drastic reduction of hiker injuries and rescue missions, and have helped ease trail congestion considerably.

TROMSØ: HUB OF THE ARCTIC REAL ESTATE BOOM

Norway's healthiest real estate markets have typically consisted of cities like Oslo and Stavanger, the country's North Sea energy capital. Thanks to a growing local economy, a newcomer is now at the forefront of Norway's real estate market, Tromsø. Known as Norway's "capital of the Arctic," Tromsø is a beautiful city and municipality set among mountains, fjords and islands. Locals and visitors alike enjoy the city's dramatic scenery as well as access to fantastic fishing, skiing and camping. Lying roughly 200 miles north of the Arctic Circle, Tromsø enjoys a warmer climate than other cities along the same latitude due to the Gulf Stream. With a population of 72,000, Tromsø is "the only big city in the northern part of Norway," says Einar Storhaug, an agent with Eiendoms Megler1, Norway's largest broker.

Economic expansion in Tromsø has fueled home prices over the past two years— jumping 10% in 2013 and an additional 8% in the first half of 2014— making the area Norway's most robust property market in terms of growth. Newly constructed higher end homes in the area have been exceeding 7 million kroner, or about $1.13 million. Among the most prominent new developments in the area is Promenaden, a 62-unit building on the city's main island of Tromsøya. At roughly $1,365 a square foot, Promenaden's 1,200 square foot penthouses are close to the average cost of apartments in prime locations of Paris.

Jan-Frode Janson, president of SpareBank1 Nord-Norge, credits the real estate boom in Tromsø to the strength of the local economy. Growth in areas such as fishing, construction and oil and gas as well as job expansion by energy companies Aker Solutions and Subsea 7 are expected to bring an influx of international professionals to the area. In addition to interest among professionals, property directors are also seeing interest among empty nesters who have sold their family homes and are looking to relocate.

September Book Club well attended

Thanks to Geneva Tweeten for arranging to have Howard Sherpe, author of "Over the Back Fence" (and seven other books) September Book Club was very well attended.

Vice-President David Peterson spoke about the Steam Engine Days parade scheduled for Saturday, September 6, in Mabel, Minnesota and the Viking ship. He and Loretta Knutson suggested that we use cars again this year as Vice-President David is no longer able to set up and return the boat after the parade without additional help. He said he would talk with J.C. Nerstad to see if he may have a vehicle we can use.

It was reported that Winona Lodge enjoyed our visit to them in August and look forward to visiting us next year.

The pulled pork and buns need to be taken out of the freezer at least 1 day before serving.

Pumpkin Pie Cake

Recipe from Dode Stotskopf

If you were at our October meeting, this was on the dessert table. Dode, thank you for sharing!

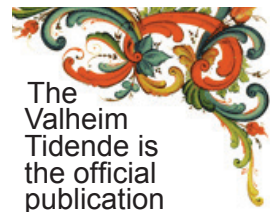

Grease a 9x13 cake pan well. Mix first 7 ingredients together and pour into pan.

Layer with half the cake mix, then nuts, then other half of cake mix. Drizzle the melted butter all over the mixture.

Bake at 350°. Test with toothpick.

When cake is cooled, top with: Beat together cream cheese, powdered sugar and cool whip. Beat more gentle than fast and strong. Nice frosting texture.

Frost the cake, sprinkle with nuts. Refrigerate.
